Old Houses in Friar Street, Worcester. There are many fine specimens of old timbered houses in Friar Street and New Street, for Worcester has its roots deep in history; indeed it is one of the most ancient cities of England. Built and fortified, perhaps, by the Britons, it was certainly destroyed twice by the Danes and was a place of importance when the Conqueror came. The Cathedral dates back a thousand years, and the manufacture of gloves for many centuries; the Glovers' Company was incorporated in 1497.

Dear Mr. We spent

a very interesting
day here yesterday

we went round the
porcelain works,
cathedral etc.

Teraburg is a lovely old place to be met here on the island.

Over here for the day from Droitwich - a fascinating old place Droitwich is most ODD - I like it - but it is rather weird
I'm going to try the
brine swimming bath
You can't sink in the water! Love from K.S.
